Compare crime in America’s cities in
City Crime Rankings 2014

Washington DC (December 6, 2013) – Murder …rape …robbery …assault… Which of America’s larger cities have the highest crime rate rankings? Are crime rates rising or falling? Are some cities making strides in crime fighting – as compared to earlier years and other cities? Once again, CQ Press provides the details in its accessible annual collection of metropolitan crime data published in City Crime Rankings 2014: Crime in Metropolitan America.

Providing clear crime comparisons for cities and metropolitan areas throughout the United States, researchers (and potential future residents) will find numbers, rates, and trends for total crime, violent crime, murder, rape, robbery, aggravated assault, property crime, burglary, larceny-theft, and motor vehicle theft. Numbers and per capita rates of police in cities are also included.

Presenting both data and context, in both alphabetical and rank order for all U.S. metro areas and cities with a population of 75,000 or more, City Crime Rankings 2014 translates complicated and often convoluted statistics into meaningful, useful, and easy-to-understand information. Researchers, legislators, policy analysts, journalists, and community members will be able to access completely up-to-date statistics about specific cities, comparing them against other cities across the country.

City Crime Rankings is an annual reference book that, along with State Rankings, is published by CQ Press and analyzes and ranks states and cities in various categories. Other statistics of the fifty states and District of Columbia on health care, education, state crime, and social and economic conditions are featured on CQ Press’ newest platform, State Stats.

Kathleen O'Leary Morgan holds a master’s degree in public administration and has served in a number of media and legislative liaison positions with the U.S. Department of Transportation, where she was also deputy director of congressional affairs.

Scott Morgan is an attorney who served as chief counsel to Senator Bob Dole’s 1988 presidential campaign. They both have compiled books of state and city rankings for almost two decades.

Rachel Boba Santos is an associate professor at Florida Atlantic University in the School of Criminology and Criminal Justice. She works with police departments and conducts research on police accountability, the effectiveness of crime reduction efforts by police, and crime analysis.
